everywhere in the world communities and nations organize themselves in relation to water we divert water from rivers lakes and aquifers to our homes workplaces irrigation canals and hydro generating stations we use it for bathing swimming recreation and it functions as a symbol of purity in ritual performances in order to facilitate and manage our relationship with water we develop institutions technologies and cultural practices entirely devoted to its appropriation and distribution and through these institutions we construct relations of class gender ethnicity and nationality relying on first hand ethnographic research the contributors to this volume examine the social life of water in diverse settings and explore the impacts of commodification urbanization and technology on the availability and quality of water supplies each case study speaks to a local set of issues but the overall perspective is global with representation from all continents fluid turbulence is often referred to as the unsolved problem of classical physics yet paradoxically its mathematical description resembles quantum field theory the present book addresses the idealised problem posed by homogeneous isotropic turbulence in order to concentrate on the fundamental aspects of the general problem it is written from the perspective of a theoretical physicist but is designed to be accessible to all researchers in turbulence both theoretical and experimental and from all disciplines the book is in three parts and begins with a very simple overview of the basic statistical closure problem along with a summary of current theoretical approaches this is followed by a precise formulation of the statistical problem along with a complete set of mathematical tools as needed in the rest of the book and a summary of the generally accepted phenomenology of the subject part 2 deals with current issues in phenomenology including the role of galilean invariance the physics of energy transfer and the fundamental problems inherent in numerical simulation part 3 deals with renormalization methods with an emphasis on the taxonomy of the subject rather than on lengthy mathematical derivations the book concludes with some discussion of current lines of research and is supplemented by three appendices containing detailed mathematical treatments of the effect of isotropy on correlations the properties of gaussian distributions and the evaluation of coefficients in statistical theories new updated content reflects the latest changes in the industry new two new chapters include crisis resource management and patient safety and infection control and prevention
